INTRODUCTION

1. Handwriting analysis is a scientific study of our personality - who we are and how we think, feel and behave. Handwriting is as unique as our fingerprinting and demonstrates an x-ray of our mind. More than hundred and fifty years of research has proved that it is not our hand which "Writes" but it is our Brain which produces its "Prints" on the paper based on who we are.
2. Honesty, Reliability and Emotional Stability are some of the most desired traits that one looks for in a potential employee. A well balanced individual who is reliable and trustworthy is really an asset to any work situation. It is extremely critical therefore to screen applicants for these traits before making any hiring decision which may otherwise cost dearly to the organization on account of theft, pilferage, credibility etc. not to mention the time lost in finding the right replacement. Unfortunately no interview and even most of the reference checks fail to bring these to light.
3. The enclosed report, is an analysis of Dishonesty and Violent tendencies of an applicant requested for hiring purposes. It is not a detailed report of each of the individual's personality traits nor an in-depth study of personality, which is available on request separately.

The report is organized in two syndromes for better understanding. The syndromes are:

- Dishonesty
- Violence/Criminal tendencies

Comments:

Dishonesty :

The analysis of John's writing reveals a person who is extremely acquisitive of worldly possessions. He has the desire to acquire, to possess and gain more than he needs or deserves. Possessions make him feel secure and therefore he does his best to hold on to them. He wants to own for the sake of possessing and for the security his belongings represent to him. The craving for possessions is often a defense against anxiety and is so strong that it will be difficult for him to toe the line of society and may result in waywardness. He will not be able to exercise restraint over his need for acquisition and this might result in his trying to take advantage of every material opportunity that comes his way for his profit.

In order to acquire things, he might decide to engage in deception, cover up or lying. He will however come across as someone who is extremely nice and intelligent and will be able to present a polished exterior to others who will not be able to figure out his machinations. In other words, he will play the role of a con artist to perfection. He will calculate every response before saying and doing something and will do a good job of that.

He will suffer from profound guilt over things that he does and the behavior he engages in but will not be able to control it. The anxiety over the same will force him to engage more in dishonest activities.

Violence :

Even though John will be able to present a cool and polished exterior, he seems to have violent and quarrelsome tendencies whenever he is not able to meet his craving for possessions.

Recommendations:

The person is extremely unreliable and exhibits major dishonest tendencies and is not recommended for hire.

These are the findings and interpretations made by the application of the principles of graphology, made without bias and without prejudice and without liability to the analyst. This analysis was prepared for vocational purposes only and only factors directly related to the job have been discussed. The results embodied in this report should not be substituted for other vital information such as that obtained from interviews, references or review of previous job performance. This information is provided as an aid toward understanding the personality of the individual and is based upon probability. Opinions based on faxed copies are qualified and subject to verification by the examination of the original writing.
